Subject: Planning training for Local Councils: Getting design right now and setting our ambitions for the future - 30 November: 9.30-10.30 am

Information Classification: CONTROLLED

Dear clerks

We are offering shorter planning training events based on one or two topics this year. These will be online Teams events aimed at clerks and local councillors in Cornwall. We are trialling a simpler format, making joining these events easier for you and your councillors. You will no longer need to book places but can just click on the Microsoft Teams meeting link to join on the day. Please forward this email to your local council members for them to use if they would like to attend:

We are living in challenging times. We want to ensure that all people have opportunities wherever they live. Homes have become expensive to buy or rent; a crisis which is particularly affecting younger adults and their ability to stay near where they have grown up. Recovery from the pandemic, tackling the climate and biodiversity emergencies and technological advances have had and will have a huge impact on the way that we live, work and travel. Tackling these issues create an urgent need for us to think long term and take a stronger planned approach to creating a more prosperous future for our residents. Prosperous Cornwall 2050 will create a strategy against which future planning changes can be developed.

Following on from the Government's drive for better design and the push for communities to have a greater say on design matters locally, the Council is looking to adopt the new Cornwall Design Guide later this month to help achieve this goal.

Join Richard Grant, Head of Planning Policy, and Rob Lacey, Planning Policy Group Leader, for this important training event to find out more about Prosperous Cornwall 2050, the Cornwall Design Guide and the emerging new concept of design coding.

Presentations from these events will be available on our Local Council Planning Conferences webpage.
